Fluorine Determination in Bone Using an Ion-Selective Electrode

MATSUURA Shūji

Fluorine analysis may assist the relative dating of bone remains of archaeological, anthropological or palaeontological interest. This paper describes a technique for determining fluorine in bone with the specific ion-sensitive electrode, and shows a high degree of reproducibility of the method.